At a late meeting of the Commission of bankruptcy, and before a good Sir, it was challenged...

"I am bound to say, Sir, with challenges two, the first from friend Langley, the second from you...

"Now, in giving the preference, I trust you will admit, I have acted with prudence, and done what was fit...

"By however rejecting this challenge to meet you, Dear with a moment, and I will adduce Three powerful reasons by way of excuse—

"In the first place, unless I am grossly deceived, I myself am in conscience the party aggrieved...

"Again, Sir, I think it by far the more sinful, To stand and be shot, than to sit for a skink!

"And lastly, my life, be it never longer, Possesses me in what I would not lose...

"Sir JOHN SINCLAIR'S ADDRESS CONVENERS OF THE SEVERAL COUNTIES IN SCOTLAND."

I have always considered it a very important advantage enjoyed by the Gentry of Scotland, that besides the annual meetings of the Freeholders at the Michlachs, statutory meetings are likewise held by the Commissioners of Supply...

NEWSPAPER DUTIES.

The 14th report of the Commissioners for inquiring into the state of the Press, contains, with a view to the recommendation, with a view to the duties on newspaper advertisements, would increase them, in the ratio...

Under the circumstances which have been brought before us on this subject, we have been led to think that considerable relief and encouragement would be afforded to the press, if our proposals, which are of a liberal and important addition would probably be made to the general rate...

We are fully satisfied that the Commissioners should have made the above proposition. It is notorious, and the present state of the press, and the newspapers, are rendered with inordinate duties, which are seriously injurious to the trade, as well as to the revenue.

Now, the present proposition of a progressive duty on advertisements, beginning with a rate of one penny per line, and increasing by lines, would be a most exorbitant addition to the present tax.

It will be easy to prove this beyond all doubt. The present duty on all advertisements is 5s. 6d., and by the proposed scheme this duty is to commence at 6s. 6d., so that it is only on advertisements of five lines that any reduction of duty is to take place.

But newspapers, with the exception of one or two of the London journals, contain scarcely any advertisements of five lines. For one such advertisement there are a hundred longer ones.

The low duty, therefore, is really illusory; there will be, in fact, no diminution of duty, but an increase of the same, and the same will be the case as to the interest of all concerned.

Another ten lines it is proposed to levy an additional duty of 1s. 6d.; after fifteen lines an additional duty of 2s. 6d.; and after twenty lines an additional duty of 3s. 6d.

It will be seen, therefore, that there would be no diminution of duty, but arise at three different stages, equal to 40 per cent., 112 per cent., and nearly 300 per cent. on the present duty.

It will be seen, therefore, that there would be no diminution of duty, but arise at three different stages, equal to 40 per cent., 112 per cent., and nearly 300 per cent. on the present duty.

Board of Trade, who seems inclined to regulate the great extent of this country, by new-fangled notions, which experience at defiance. I should be glad to ask, whether his rash experiments have not already inflicted deadly wounds on the country, and whether the same will not be repeated, if the agricultural classes are reduced to the same miserable state as the commercial, will not the whole frame of this country be broken up, and a revolution be effected?

As dangerous a crisis, I trust that the Agricultural Interest of Scotland, will be caused to make a united exertion to resist the measures proposed, and to demand a plan that was presented in 1825-26, when the Commissioners of Supply in thirteen counties, appointed Committees to meet in Edinburgh, to concert an uniform plan of proceeding, and the foundation of a combined effort for the relief of agriculture.

The County Committees appointed on that occasion, first assembled at Edinburgh, on the 16th December, 1825. Since that time, they have met several times, and their report, which was printed and circulated for consideration, and, after some discussion, it was unanimously adopted at a subsequent meeting, held at the Waterloo Hotel, on the 23d December following. The proceedings were then printed, and transmitted to all the counties of Scotland, for their concurrence.

The business was concluded in a most satisfactory manner. All irritating political allusions were avoided, and a general disposition manifested, to promote, by every possible means, the great purpose for which these meetings were convened. The error of the Commissioners is in not seeing this, and that any addition to it would cause the revenue to increase, but to fall off. The reasoning of the Commissioners, in this respect, is entirely erroneous.

It earnestly recommended the adoption of a similar plan at the present moment. Let every county in Scotland appoint a Committee, to be met at the Waterloo Hotel, in Edinburgh, on Saturday the 18th of November next. No harm can possibly result, either from the appointment, or from the discussions of such an assembly; while, on the other hand, the beneficial consequences may be expected from their exertions.

Before concluding this address, it is necessary to allude to a most mistaken idea, that the cattle and sheep districts of the country are interested in the question of importing foreign corn. Who are the great purchasers of these commodities, but the corn farmers of England? and if they are reduced to the same miserable state as the agricultural land, will not the same principle be applicable to them?

I have long been endeavouring, in concurrence with a number of respectable friends, to promote the interests and prosperity of agriculture. But unless some great exertions are made, the country will be ruined, and the people will be reduced to a state of wretchedness, which will never be restored.

It will be no relief. To pay 2s. in place of 3s. 6d. will be, it is no burden, and will increase the number of advertisements; but to pay 10s. in place of 3s. 6d. will be no burden, and will decrease their number.

The truth is, that the scheme of a progressive duty is not new, and has been tried in Ireland, after a short trial was given up as impolitic. If any alteration were proposed in these duties it ought clearly to be a reduction.

sufficient of themselves to extirpate fever. But that assertion would be done away with, by the fact being frequently to be met with in boarding schools and other establishments, where it will be known, that matters are not attended to with the most effectual remedy, in his opinion, to limit the spread of contagion, would be to separate the clean from the infected, which, in the present crowded state of the hospitals, could be done by the establishment of a separate hospital for the infected.

At the Meath Hospital upwards of 400 tickets of application for admission, remained at present unoccupied for many weeks, and the number would be specified, doubled, or many were deterring admission from their knowledge of the multitude of prior applications. He understood that on a late high state of fever, had come from Cluzipud to the above-mentioned hospital, but for want of accommodation they were under the necessity of being sent back again.

APOCRYPHA CONTROVERSY.

This most important subject occupies the attention of the country, and it must be gratifying to the lovers of the pure circulation to know that every where there is a decided opinion in favour of the Apocrypha, which had prevailed in certain quarters. The error of the Commissioners is in not seeing this, and that any addition to it would cause the revenue to increase, but to fall off.

The Bible Societies of Crawfordjohn, Lasswade parish, Dalkeith, and Dysart, Pabhill, and Sinclearville, have conducted the business of the subscription of the edition of the Bible and Apocrypha, which had prevailed in certain quarters. The error of the Commissioners is in not seeing this, and that any addition to it would cause the revenue to increase, but to fall off.
